Application process

In normal circumstances the PSPLA will advise you within 5 working days of receipt of your complaint whether your complaint has been accepted and, if so, how it will proceed.

What you can complain about

Complaints about licensed people or companies or certified people

You can complain about licensed people or companies or certified people when they carry out private security or private investigation work.

The specific grounds for making a complaint about a company officer, licence holder or certificate holder are set out in Step 3 of this form.

Complaints about unlicensed people or companies or uncertified people

You can complain about a business or individual carrying out private security or private investigation work without the necessary licence or certificate.

You can also complain about businesses such as bars that are employing uncertified crowd controllers (eg, bouncer). These businesses don't necessarily have to be licensed, but they must employ certified people.

Generally, you can tell if an employee may not be certified because he or she isn't wearing a current ID badge (check the expiry date), or the badge is not authentic.
